PHOTOGRAPHY POLICY

The Arboretum at Penn State places some restrictions on the use of the H.O. Smith Botanic Gardens and other parts of the Arboretum1 as a setting for taking photographs, including use of all image-recording devices, such as cameras, camcorders, and cell phones.

The Arboretum asks that all photographers, especially those filming videos, be respectful of others’ right to enjoy the peacefulness and tranquility of the Arboretum and of the Smith Botanic Gardens.

In keeping with this philosophy, photographers who are using tripods may not block walkways. Free-standing lighting, reflector umbrellas, or other studio equipment may not be erected or arranged.2 All lighting equipment or reflectors must be held by a person. Access to power sources in the botanic gardens is reserved for use by Arboretum and University staff and rental clients.3

In addition to these rules, certain restrictions apply according to the purpose of the photography, as explained below. Any photographers who do not comply with these restrictions will be prohibited from conducting any activity within the botanic gardens and/or other parts of the Arboretum.

NON-COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY

Non-commercial photography for personal, course-related, or institutional purposes by University faculty, staff, students, and visitors to the gardens is permitted with the understanding that all photographers must comply with the stipulations regarding equipment (stated above) and pertaining to wedding photography, as explained below. The non-commercial category includes family and friends taking graduation photos, alumni or family members taking reunion photos, and instructors taking photos for academic purposes unless a professional photographer is used on a fee basis. Formal group photos may be taken in the gardens for non-commercial purposes, except as described below for wedding photographs, but we ask that you contact the event and marketing coordinator (kkr1@psu.edu) in advance.
